LILTS O'LOVE AND LAUGHTER

UNROMANTIC I hear the ocean surges calling, calling, calling to me, calling, calling, calling me to come away.

Oh, I hear the ocean surges with their calls and with their urges, Calling me to the spice-groves of fair Cathay.

But they'll never get me going—going, going, going, going. Where the white spume of the sea is in the air.

So I turn my back forever on the motions of the oceans, Turn my back on romance, flappers and Cathay;

And meals cost too doggone much to throw away.
